Dayton's 1,300 Teachers Hold Schools' Fate

Meeting Called To Decide Future; Instructors May Work Without Pay

INJUNCTION DISSOLVED
Judge Throws Out Contempt Charges Against Board Officials

DAYTON, Nov. 2—(UP)—A private mass meeting of Dayton's 1,300 public school teachers today was expected to determine whether the poverty-stricken schools here will be reopened quickly. The schools were closed three days ago by order of the board of education.

Two questions were to be submitted to the teachers by a citizens' committee at the meeting beginning at 2 p. m. These questions were:

1. Would you agree to return to work immediately, with your salary withheld until money is obtained from the $240,000 state school foundation certification to Dayton after Dec. 1?

2. Would you agree to work for five weeks, after Dec. 1 without pay, if the 2-mill school tax levy is passed by voters here next Tuesday? (The levy would provide an estimated $500,000 a year after Jan. 1, 1939.)

May Open Monday
There seemed little possibility that the schools would reopen next Monday, but there was no assurance that the 34,000 pupils would be called back even then.

A temporary injunction against closing the schools, which was granted last week by Judge Null M. Hodapp, was dissolved late yesterday after a three-hour conference with the school board and the citizens' committee in Common Pleas court. Judge Hodapp also dropped contempt of court proceedings against five board members and two school officials who had ignored the injunction.

The board rejected a compromise proposal aimed at reopening the schools immediately and made no commitment on whether that course it would follow in the financial crisis. The schools have a $61,000 deficit and no money will be available for several weeks.

The board's action was expected to be dependent upon the teachers' attitude today.

Although the injunction granted by Judge Hodapp was dissolved, the petition of Richard L. Withrow, dissenting board member, for a restraining, still stands. It will be heard Thursday.

MERCURY SOARS TOWARD RECORD HIGH FOR FALL

The mercury appeared headed for new records Wednesday afternoon when it hit 68 at 1 o'clock and was expected to continue its climb even higher later in the day.

"I can't remember any such weather before at this time of year," Dr. H. R. Clarke, Circleville weather recorder, said. The highest temperature Tuesday was 68, the lowest during the night, 39.

The rising temperature Wednesday brought a prediction from the state weather bureau of probable rains on Thursday. Farmers welcomed the forecast of showers. Corn husking has been delayed by the dry weather which causes the leaves to break from the fodder.

Rain is needed also for the wheat. Showers after seeding sprouted the wheat but there have been no good rains to boost its growth.

The dry weather in wooded sections of Ohio has brought appeals to farmers to watch out for forest fires. John A. Bastian, Chillicothe, associate state forester, asked co-operation of farmers to prevent disastrous forest fires.

Dry weather has resulted in a number of fires in southern Ohio.

KING ACCEPTS ROOSEVELT INVITATION TO PAY VISIT

LONDON, Nov. 2—(UP)—The Daily Herald asserted today that a personal letter from King George VI to President Roosevelt, accepting an invitation to pay a visit to Washington next Summer, was on its way to Washington.

The newspaper said that after the King and Queen completed their Canadian tour next Summer they would be the guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House for three days and two nights.

It was asserted also that when the King and Queen arrived in North American waters United States and French warships, as well as Canadian ones, would welcome them.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—(UP)—The executive board of the United Automobile Workers' union begins an important series of meetings today which may have far-reaching effects on the union's previously unfriendly relations with the Ford Motor company.

Two subcommittees are drafting reports on problems affecting Ford—the only major automobile manufacturer not under contract with the U. A. W.—and it was reported reliably that Ford officials may cooperate to make one of the proposals succeed.

Chief interest centered on a plan for standardizing wages, hours, and working conditions in 2,000 plants supplying automotive parts. That plan has been the subject of

STATE LIQUOR CHIEF RESIGNS TO AID SAWYER

Clarence J. Burk Asks All Ohio Employees To Back Democratic Nominee

DAVEY'S ORDER DEFIED

Cincinnati Sees Margin Of 88,000 Ballots In Cuyahoga

BY UNITED PRESS
Republican charges that state liquor permit holders and deputy motor vehicle registrars have been solicited for contributions to aid the campaign of Charles Sawyer, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, coincided today with the resignation of Clarence J. Burk, as state liquor store supervisor, to work for Sawyer's election.

The charges that employees and permit holders have been solicited were made by John W. Bricker, the Republican candidate in a Cincinnati speech. Shortly before its delivery Burk resigned as liquor store supervisor, giving as his reason his wish to work for Sawyer.

The resignation was considered significant in view of charges that Governor Davey has instructed state employees not to take part in the campaign in Sawyer's behalf.

Letters Acknowledged

Burk acknowledged that he had sent letters to 1,000 state workers urging them to activity in Sawyer's interest. Burk said that "none of us could stay on if Bricker is elected." Sawyer has charged that Davey forces would retain 30 percent of state patronage if Bricker is elected under an alleged "deal" between Bricker and the governor.

Bricker said that letters enclosing blank checks had been sent out to state liquor permit holders from Democratic state headquarters over the signature of Arthur L. Limbach, New Philadelphia, Democratic state chairman. In denouncing Sawyer's charge of a Bricker-Davey "deal," the Republican nominee said the letters and other material proved consummation of a "deal" between Sawyer and some elements within the present administration.

Sawyer spoke in Toledo, predicting that he would carry the state's largest county, Cuyahoga, by 88,000 votes. He renewed charges of a "deal" between Bricker and Davey, allegedly based on a 70-30 patronage split.

"I am not going to be a 70 percent governor," he said. "I have made no deals and am not offering myself to you on a discount basis."

In Columbus Dr. Carl Watson, state W. P. A. director, announced that Ohio's 285,000 W. P. A. workers will be given a holiday election day in order to vote. Previously a half day's work on election day has been required, but

FARMER LOSES ARM AS SHOTGUN IS DISCHARGED

ZANESVILLE, Nov. 2—(UP)—Serum rushed here from Detroit by airplane brought improvement to the condition of Fred Long, 38, farmer, who lost his left arm by the accidental discharge of his shotgun in a car while chasing Halloween pranksters Saturday night.

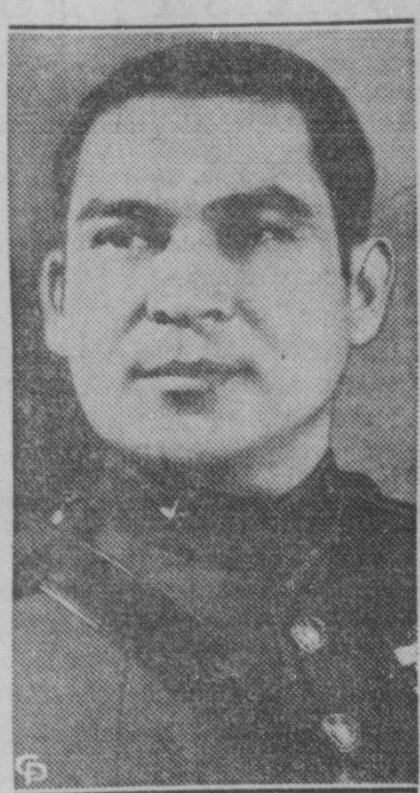

Gangrene developed after amputation of the arm, and as Long's condition became worse, physicians sent for the serum which was brought here in two shipments.

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 2—(UP)—An injunction restraining the Pioneer Tobacco Workers from "picketing by force" at the P. Lorillard Tobacco Co. plant was granted today by Judge P. P. Boli in Butler county Common Pleas court at Hamilton.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 2—(UP)—Martin L. Davey announced today that national guard have been put "on notice" for possible service at Middletown in connection with a strike at the P. Lorillard Tobacco Co. plant.

"I am sorry that it may be necessary to send troops to Middletown in connection with C. I. O. strike at the local tobacco factory," the governor said in a public statement.

The governor said the request for troops had not come from Lorillard.

BEST HUSKERS OF NATION VIE AT SIOUX FALLS

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Nov. 2—(UP)—Sleeping quarters were at a premium today within 50 miles of Dell Rapids, S. D. The little hamlet 22 miles northwest of here tomorrow will be host to an estimated 150,000 persons attending the national cornhuskers meet.

Husking fans from throughout the Midwest were pouring into the Sioux Falls area today. Chamber of Commerce officials organized a housing bureau to handle the anticipated crowd.

The 60-acre field through which the 20 state titleholders and runners-up will work was pronounced in "perfect" condition today by tourney officials.

A drizzling rain late yesterday laid the dust on the field and on side roads leading to the battleground.

Nearly all contestants appeared at the scene yesterday to plan their campaign, and more than half worked out in practice fields set aside for them.

The rain yesterday aroused dopests, and some were predicting that Ray Hanson of Minnesota, last year's titleholder, would possibly retain his title. Hanson won the championship last year in a heavy drizzle, and was credited with victory because he was a "mud horse."

STOCKS UNSTEADY
NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(UP)—Stocks failed to develop a definite trend in quiet forenoon dealings today. Prices were narrowly changed from last night's final levels in all sections. Trading fell off to the slowest pace since Sept. 23, with volume for the full session indicated at less than one million shares on the basis of the first hour turnover.

HOOVER CLAIMS ABDUCTED MAN SLAIN, BURNED

Ex-Convicts Under Arrest In New York After Quiet Investigations

$14,900 PAID IN RANSOM

Arthur Fried Thrown Into Furnace During Effort To Negotiate

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(UP)—J. Edgar Hoover announced today that his Department of Justice agents had captured a gang of former convicts believed responsible for three kidnappings in New York. The kidnappings had not been disclosed heretofore. All the victims were adults; one was murdered.

Arthur Fried, missing since Dec. 14, was shot to death and his body burned in a furnace while the gang was demanding $200,000 ransom for his safe return, Hoover said.

Those seized were Joseph Stephen Sacoda, 27, Demetrius Gula, 30, John Virga, 34, and William Jackins, 27, all of New York. All had prison records for crimes ranging from counterfeiting to burglary and arson.

$14,900 Paid To Gang
A total of $14,900 was paid in ransom in two of the kidnappings, none in the third. Hoover said the gang also was wanted for three robberies which netted $1,798.

Those kidnapped besides Fried were Benjamin Farber, 35, Brooklyn coal company proprietor, and Norman Miller, 19, whose father, Charles, has a stevedoring business.

The disappearance of Fried had been a mystery. On the night of Dec. 4, Hoover said, two men in an automobile forced a car driven by Fried to the curb in White Plains and made him get into their car.

The next day Fried was forced to write his family a note demanding $200,000 for his release. The ransom negotiations continued until January 3 when Hugo Fried, a brother, agreed to contact the kidnappers. He was to have gone to a theatre and dropped the ransom money from the mezzanine floor to a man on the street below. He did not drop the money.

Hoover said the victim already was dead when the contact was arranged. He said Fried was killed by one of the kidnappers four days after he was seized. He said the body was burned in a furnace in the basement of the Ukrainian hall, the same hideaway used when Miller was kidnapped.

Hoover said that Farber was kidnapped last April 18 while he was walking in front of the National City bank, Brooklyn. He was taken to New York while negotiations for $25,000 ransom were carried out. He was released a few days later after $1,900 had been dropped from a bridge to a man in the street below.

Miller was seized at Coney Island on July 24 while he was walking with a friend, Sidney Lehrer. Lehrer was taken to the lodge hall

DEATH of Mrs. Marion Nichols, 30, daughter of an eastern college professor, who was found dying on an Evanston, Ill., street dressed in pajamas, mystifies authorities. Mrs. Nichols, according to her husband, Richard, 31, a research engineer, had started for a walk against his protests, to quiet her nerves. Theory that she had been hit by an automobile was weighed but several facts, including the one that her clothes were unmarred, led to the belief the young matron might have been murdered.

Association Discusses Community Chest Plan

Suggestion that Circleville have a community chest fund in future years was offered at a meeting of the Benevolent association, Tuesday, by Mrs. W. W. Robinson.

The idea has been considered for some time but no definite steps toward the establishment of a community chest have ever been taken. It was discussed in a preliminary manner at the Tuesday meeting but no action taken. Several of the officers of the organization were absent.

It is contended that the establishment of a community chest would prevent numerous requests on residents for contributions to the various welfare organizations and would also give organizations an established amount of funds on which to operate. The suggestion will be discussed at a future meeting of the organization.

DEAD MAN'S EYES MAY ASSIST TWO REGAIN VISION

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2—(UP)—An anonymous specialist was to attempt today to restore the sight of two persons with the eyes of a dead man.

The surgeon reportedly found that the eyes, from the body of John W. Deering, 40 year old Utah murder executed by a firing squad, were in "excellent condition" after their trip here by plane. They were packed in ice and later frozen in a hospital refrigerator. The corneas will be sliced carefully and transplanted in the eyes of a youth and an elderly woman. More than 50 blind persons pleaded for the opportunity to see again.

Names of the doctor's patients were carefully withheld, at least until after the operations. One was said to be a 25 year old youth sightless since childhood. The woman was 65.

In addition to usual difficulties of the delicate cornea grafting no eyes had ever been sent such a distance before. It possibly will be several weeks before results of the operations can be determined. After the new corneas are put in place, they are stitched to the eyeball and the patient's eyes are bandaged.

Dayton's 1,300 Teachers Hold Schools' Fate

Meeting Called To Decide
Future; Instructors May Work Without Pay

INJUNCTION DISSOLVED

Judge Throws Out Contempt
Charges Against Board
Officials

DAYTON, Nov. 2—(UP)—A private mass meeting of Dayton's 1,300 public school teachers today was expected to determine whether the poverty-stricken schools here will be reopened quickly. The schools were closed three days ago by order of the board of education.

Two questions were to be submitted to the teachers by a citizens' committee at the meeting beginning at 2 p. m. These questions were:

1. Would you agree to return to work immediately, with your salary withheld until money is obtained from the $240,000 state school foundation certification to Dayton after Dec. 1?

2. Would you agree to work for five weeks, after Dec. 1 without pay, if the 2-mill school tax levy is passed by voters here next Tuesday? (The levy would provide an estimated $500,000 a year after Jan. 1, 1939.)

May Open Monday

There seemed little possibility that the schools would reopen next Monday, but there was no assurance that the 34,000 pupils would be called back even then.

A temporary injunction against closing the schools, which was granted last week by Judge Null M. Hodapp, was dissolved late yesterday after a three-hour conference with the school board and the citizens' committee in Common Pleas court. Judge Hodapp also dropped contempt of court proceedings against five board members and two school officials who had ignored the injunction.

The board rejected a compromise proposal aimed at reopening the schools immediately and made no commitment on whether what course it would follow in the financial crisis. The schools have a $61,000 deficit and no money will be available for several weeks.

The board's action was expected to be dependent upon the teachers' attitude today.

Although the injunction granted by Judge Hodapp was dissolved, the petition of Richard L. Withrow, dissenting board member, for a restraining suit stands. It will be heard Thursday.

MERCURY SOARS TOWARD RECORD HIGH FOR FALL

The mercury appeared headed for new records Wednesday afternoon when it hit 68 at 1 o'clock and was expected to continue its climb even higher later in the day. "I can't remember any such weather before at this time of year," Dr. H. R. Clarke, Circleville weather recorder, said. The highest temperature Tuesday was 68, the lowest during the night, 39.

The rising temperature Wednesday brought a prediction from the state weather bureau of probable rains on Thursday. Farmers welcomed the forecast of showers. Corn husking has been delayed by the dry weather which causes the leaves to break from the fodder. Rain is needed also for the wheat. Showers after seedling sprouted the wheat but there have been no good rains to boost its growth.

The dry weather in wooded sections of Ohio has brought appeals to farmers to watch out for forest fires. John A. Bastian, Chillicothe, associate state forester, asked cooperation of farmers to prevent disastrous forest fires. Dry weather has resulted in a number of fires in southern Ohio.

The 60-acre field through which the 20 state titleholders and runners-up will work was pronounced in "perfect" condition today by tourney officials.

A drizzling rain late yesterday laid the dust on the field and on side roads leading to the battleground.

Nearly all contestants appeared at the scene yesterday to plan their campaign, and more than half worked out in practice fields set aside for them.

The rain yesterday aroused dopests, and some were predicting that Ray Hanson of Minnesota, last year's titleholder, would possibly retain his title. Hanson won the championship last year in a heavy drizzle, and was credited with victory because he was a "mud horse."

Investigations

$14,900 PAID IN RANSOM

Arthur Fried Thrown Into
Furnace During Effort
To Negotiate

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(UP)—J. Edgar Hoover announced today that his Department of Justice agents had captured a gang of former convicts believed responsible for three kidnappings in New York. The kidnappings had not been disclosed heretofore. All the victims were adults; one was murdered.

Arthur Fried, missing since Dec. 14, was shot to death and his body burned in a furnace while the gang was demanding $200,000 ransom for his safe return, Hoover said. Those seized were Joseph Stephen Sacoda, 27, Demetrius Gula, 30, John Virga, 34, and William Jacklin, 27, all of New York. All had prison records for crimes ranging from counterfeiting to burglary and arson.

$14,900 Paid To Gang
A total of $14,900 was paid in ransom in two of the kidnappings, none in the third. Hoover said the gang also was wanted for three robberies which netted $1,798.

Those kidnapped besides Fried were Benjamin Farber, 38, Brooklyn coal company proprietor, and Norman Miller, 19, whose father, Charles, has a stevedoring business.

The disappearance of Fried had been a mystery. On the night of Dec. 4, Hoover said, two men in an automobile forced a car driven by Fried to the curb in White Plains and made him get into their car.

The next day Fried was forced to write his family a note demanding $200,000 for his release. The ransom negotiations continued until January 3 when Hugo Fried, a brother, agreed to contact the kidnappers. He was to have gone to a theatre and dropped the ransom money from the mezzanine floor to a man on the street below. He did not drop the money.

Hoover said the victim already was dead when the contact was arranged. He said Fried was killed by one of the kidnappers four days after he was seized. He said the body was burned in a furnace in the basement of the Ukrainian hall, the same hideaway used when Miller was kidnapped.

Hoover said that Farber was kidnapped last April 18 while he was walking in front of the National City bank, Brooklyn. He was taken to New York while negotiations for $25,000 ransom were carried out. He was released a few days later after $1,900 had been dropped from a bridge to a man in the street below.

Miller was seized at Coney Island on July 24 while he was walking with a friend, Sidney Lehrer. Lehrer was taken to the lodge hall

COUNCIL MOVES TO TAKE HAND IN MILK SALES

Ordinance Fixing Standards May Be Considered Wednesday Eve

HEALTHERS FILE REQUEST

Disposal Plant Employees May Be Put Under Civil Service

An ordinance establishing standards for milk sold in Circleville will be considered by council Wednesday evening at its regular meeting.

Carl C. Leist, solicitor, said the ordinance was requested by the city board of health. He said he was following standards used in Columbus in preparing the legislation. The city has had no regulations on milk, Mr. Leist said.

Council may consider also some legislation instructing the Civil Service Commission to conduct examinations for employees of the municipal disposal plant. It is probable one chemist and about three operators will be needed at the plant.

Some appropriations will be made. Mr. Leist said, including one for $110 for payment of rents due the state on the canal lands used by the city for storage purposes.

LAND, BUILDING OF DUBLIN HILL CHURCH OFFERED

Application to sell real estate in Perry township owned by the Dublin Hill Methodist Episcopal church was filed in Common Pleas court Tuesday.

The petition says the church owns 84 acres of land and the church building. It explains that services are no longer conducted in the church and no minister is appointed for the congregation. Since the erection of the church, it says a church of a similar denomination was built in Atlanta and most of the members of the Dublin Hill congregation attend the Atlanta church.

Trustees filing the application were Elmer Shaeffer, D. H. Householder, C. W. Hays and G. P. Hunsicker.

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU

BY BOB BURNS

One of the strangest things about show business is that people that have no connection with it, shudder to think of their children being actors while on the other hand the parents of actors are the proudest people in the world, I suppose.

A young actor out here met a non-professional girl in church and they became engaged, but the other day, their minister told me he didn't think the marriage would ever come off.

He said "Neither one of 'em is good enough for the other." I asked him why he said that and he says, "Well, I've just been talkin' the matter over with both families."

British Minister Seeks To Ban Gas, City Bombing

LONDON, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain intends to propose that the great powers agree to outlaw poison gas warfare and bombing attacks on civilian populations, it was said today in well-informed political quarters.

As the house of commons met to debate the government plan to bring the British-Italian friendship agreement into effect, and in doing so to recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, it was asserted that the prime minister, confident of support for his policy of European appeasement, had worked out a sweeping diplomatic program.

It was said that as the first move toward testing the strength and value of the Munich four-power agreement on Czechoslovakia, Chamberlain intended to place before Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, the German and Italian dictators, a plan to abolish gas warfare and the airplane bombing of civilian populations. He was expected also to suggest the possibility, and the desirability, of outlawing all sorts of warfare on civilians if a practicable plan could be found.

Then, it was said, Chamberlain would arrange a direct meeting with Hitler to discuss his proposals, and the European situation generally as a preliminary to calling a British-French-German-Italian conference.

Sir Neville Henderson, British ambassador to Germany, was expected to open negotiations for a Chamberlain-Hitler conference on his return to Berlin soon from his present vacation in this country.

Chamberlain plans, if things go well, to attack the question of armaments, it was said—avoiding any idealistic scheme of immediate, radical reduction of armaments but proposing a bit by bit program of halting the armament race.

Afterward, it was said, he hoped it would be possible to seek conclusion of a series of sectional agreements among European powers as the basis for a comprehensive European peace pact.

Conference Recalled
Reliable informants said that Chamberlain has been encouraged by a secret talk he had with Hitler at the Munich conference, and that he felt he was justified in proceeding with his plans because Hitler had led him to believe that substantial progress toward limiting armaments and humanizing

AT THE CLIFTONA

Directional and depth effects were obtained in the recording of sound for Frank Capra's "You Can't Take It With You," now at the Cliftona Theatre. "Stereo-phonic," as the new set-up is called, does for sound what stereoscopic will do for the screen.

By utilizing twin microphones and twin sound channels for the smooth recording of a technical problem seldom even encountered on a motion picture stage, Capra captured the erratic crossfire of conversational chatter amongst six people, several of whom are moving about in a fairly large room.

Lionel Barrymore, appraising a stamp collection in an easy chair at the foot of a stairway; Spring Byington, busily plotting a play at her typewriter across the room; Dub Taylor, engrossed with a printing press in his alcove at the front of the house; Ann Miller, pirouetting in from the kitchen in ballet slippers to set the table; Jean Arthur, sliding gleefully down the banister—participate in as casual a conversation as though they were gazing into one another's eyes about a dining table. It's the way things go on in the Vanderhof home, as revealed in the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart stage comedy brought to the screen by Columbia.

AT THE CIRCLE

Another big broadcast takes the screen! While not as great as the first big broadcast, that of 1932, the Big Broadcast of 1938 is thoroughly entertaining, and marks the return to the screen of that master comedian W. C. Fields. Also prominent in the picture are Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, and Bob Hope, with nimble Ben Blue helping a bit hither and yon. The picture is at the Circle Theatre.

G-MEN TO KEEP CLOSE WATCH ON TOUGH CONVICT

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—(UP)—G-men, who captured Harvey Bailey, badman and kidnaper, will take no chances when they bring him and other convicts into federal court for the "murder on the rock" trial today.

Bailey and five other inmates of dread Alcatraz, island prison for the most incorrigible federal prisoners, were subpoenaed to testify in defense of James Lucas, 24 year old Texan, and Rufus Franklin, 26, charged with killing Prison Guard Royal Cline May 23.

Cline was hit on the head by a hammer in the Alcatraz furniture factory. It was the signal for a break. Lucas, Franklin and Thomas Limerick went out a window onto the roof. Limerick was shot and killed by guards and Franklin was wounded. Lucas went on a "silence strike" which resulted in an alienists' examination that adjudged him sane.

Defense attorneys, admitting their case was nearly "hopeless," will seek to show that although Lucas and Franklin participated in the break, they did not hit Cline. Bailey and the other convicts will be brought singly by prison boat from "the rock." Federal officers kept the transfer details secret. They would not reveal when Bailey would be brought into court. He was expected to be an unwilling witness at best and was reported to have said: "Uncle Harvey didn't see anything."

Campaign Speech Planned From Hyde Park Before Nov. 8 Election

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—(UP)—President Roosevelt leaves today for his New York country home to deliver a campaign speech and vote in next Tuesday's general election before returning to the capital next week.

An afternoon departure will put the presidential train in Hyde Park, N. Y., well before dinner time. Mr. Roosevelt will ride into the hottest New York state campaign since 1928 when he led the home guard as Democratic nominee for governor to support Alfred E. Smith, the nominee for president.

Republicans have not had much success in New York since that 1928 election when they won the state's big presidential electoral vote for Herbert C. Hoover although Mr. Roosevelt was elected governor and started directly from that point to the White House.

Democrats swept the state in 1932 and that tide carried on right through the 1934 and 1936 elections. Now 10 years after the Republican presidential triumph of 1928, New York state is seeing some major candidates coming down the stretch sufficiently close together to make it a real contest.

Citizen of New York

Mr. Roosevelt probably feels warranted as a citizen of New York state to give the Democratic ticket all he has on the evening of Nov. 4 when he will deliver a political address. He already has found cause to endorse Democratic candidates in Pennsylvania and California although his general intention has been to view the general election campaign in the role of president rather than in his capacity as the leader of the Democratic party. There has been comparatively little public political activity around the White House in connection with the post-primary phase of this election year.

Thomas E. Dewey, 36 year old district attorney of New York county leads the Republican charge as gubernatorial nominee. Drafted to run against him for a fourth term is Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, who broke with Mr. Roosevelt on supreme court judiciary organization. Lehman is not a 100 percent New Dealer. Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia, member of the American Labor party and in the forefront of the movement described by its friends as liberal and by its enemies as radical, has refused so far to endorse Lehman unless he, in turn, publicly endorses the New Deal.

Lehman and the Democratic senatorial candidates, Sen. Wagner, seeking reelection, and Rep. Meade, a Buffalo New Dealer put up for the seat of the late Sen. Copeland, must win if New Deal foundations are to remain secure in the richest, most populous state. A break in the bulwarks there might prove disastrous by the time 1940 rolls around.

JURORS UNABLE TO AGREE AFTER LONG ARGUMENT

A Common Pleas court jury was dismissed at 3 p. m. Tuesday after members were unable to reach an agreement in the $75 suit of D. A. Cush, Lancaster, against Renick W. Dunlap, Kingston.

Mr. Cush contended the money was due him as commission for the sale of land in Union county. Mr. Dunlap said he paid another real estate dealer for the sale.

The case was submitted to the jurors at 4 p. m. Monday. They deliberated until 6 p. m. then returned at 9 a. m. Wednesday and considered the case until they were discharged, taking an hour off for lunch.

Charles Williams of Chillicothe called on his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Sunday.

Chancey McCord, Tuesday questioned the statement made by the boys about that heavy load of sweet corn they delivered to the cannery here several years ago. He said that he helped on the job of fixing the enormous wagon bed which was to contain the largest load of factory corn yet brought in and to "completely floor" all the other haulers, and this it did, he said, but he is sure the weight was only nine tons, instead of the twelve given out by the other helpers who told the story.

Roger Hedges and Robert Cline, over at the grain elevator, were grinding small quantities of corn through some sort of an electric hat-box contraption, and by looking at the little indicator could tell, they said, how much moisture the grains contained. And by invitation of Roger we accompanied him to the experimental corn drying-curing plant of F. D. Richey which was once the traction depot. An electrically heated box with ventilation and in shape and size resembling a 3-foot hollow cube was there. Air was to be driven into this drier by an electric fan being made ready for operation by Clarence Rush, one of our electricians. In the large storage and mouse protected cage, there are hundreds of experimental seed corn samples grown this season out on Mr. Richey's experiment seed corn plot at the Ira Fisher farm in Walnut township. These seed samples many of them, will be used for further breeding this next year, but not upon the same plot, he said, because of possible interference by volunteer corn.

The local Farmers' Fire Mutual Association started in yesterday on its 36th year of existence, so the secretary-treasurer, Jesse Baum, told us. Says they have millions of risk and went through the last year with out more than the average loss. Lightning losses below the average. The annual election of officers will be about the first of the new year.

The Halloween celebration didn't all get along so well, a couple of the boys landing in the village jail for assaulting one of the deputized marshals, E. B. O. Ett. Their hearing will be before Mayor Fraunfelder this evening. The Mayor along with Karl Herrman, Circleville, have been in Mell Underwood's federal court as petit jurors for the last three days.

The county Democrat "high bosses" who have charge of campaign affairs, are announcing a big, last rally at the County Seat for Friday night with torch light procession and everything. The Old Timer, we know, will recall the kind of parades, real ones, which were held in "the old days", when Thad Cromley, Van Cleaf.

GRACE ALLEN

On Friday evening, Nov. 4, radio listeners from coast-to-coast might as well expect to be carried away in ecstasies over an original musical play of love and romance by Grace Allen. Grace has named her tuneful production "Three Loves Has Grace of 1938." She says it will combine the lyric beauty of "I Married An Angel," the keenness of "Pins and Needles," the breathless comedy of "H--s a Poppin'," and as far as her own performance goes, the combined appeal of "Victoria Regina" (Helen Hayes) and "Madam Capet" (Eva Le Gallienne). And, Oh yes, she also adds that there will be a little bit of "You Never Know," but not a sign of Clifton Webb or Lupe Velez.

SATURDAY NIGHT SERENADE

Popular composers of the last quarter century will be featured on Saturday Serenade, Nov. 5 at 9:30 p. m. over the Columbia network. To be highlighted are works of Fritz Kreisler, William C. Handy, Jerome Kern and Hoagy Carmichael.

Mary Eastman, soprano, will air "Cradle Song," a lullaby based on Kreisler's immortal "Caprice Viennois"; Bill Perry, Saturday

Night Serenade's gold-standard tenor, will sing Kern's "Make Believe" from "Show Boat"; Gus Haenschen and his orchestra will feature Handy's "St. Louis Blues" and the Serenaders, led by Emil Cote, will offer "Heart and Soul," by Hoagy Carmichael, from the new Paramount film, "A Song Is Born," as balance to the anthology of old favorites.

Other new hit tunes from Hollywood and Tin Pan Alley to be featured are "Could You Pass in Love?" from Sonja Henie's latest flicker, "My Lucky Star"; "Bewildered," a ballad by Teddy Powell and Leonard Whitecup, and "No Wonder," a brand new tune by Buddy Bernier and Bob Emmerich.

Republicans Fighting To Regain Places Lost In Last 10 Years

SMITH RACE RECALLED

Campaign Speech Planned From Hyde Park Before Nov. 8 Election

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—(UP)—President Roosevelt leaves today for his New York country home to deliver a campaign speech and vote in next Tuesday's general election before returning to the capital next week.

An afternoon departure will put the presidential train in Hyde Park, N. Y., well before dinner time. Mr. Roosevelt will ride into the hottest New York state campaign since 1928 when he led the home guard as Democratic nominee for governor to support Alfred E. Smith, the nominee for president.

Republicans have not had much success in New York since that 1928 election when they won the state's big presidential electoral vote for Herbert C. Hoover although Mr. Roosevelt was elected governor and started directly from that point to the White House.

Democrats swept the state in 1932 and that tide carried on right through the 1934 and 1936 elections. Now 10 years after the Republican presidential triumph of 1928, New York state is seeing some major candidates coming down the stretch sufficiently close together to make it a real contest.

Popular composers of the last quarter century will be featured on Saturday Serenade, Nov. 5 at 9:30 p. m. over the Columbia network. To be highlighted are works of Fritz Kreisler, William C. Handy, Jerome Kern and Hoagy Carmichael.

Mary Eastman, soprano, will air "Cradle Song," a lullaby based on Kreisler's immortal "Caprice Viennois"; Bill Perry, Saturday

Night Serenade's gold-standard tenor, will sing Kern's "Make Believe" from "Show Boat"; Gus Haenschen and his orchestra will feature Handy's "St. Louis Blues" and the Serenaders, led by Emil Cote, will offer "Heart and Soul," by Hoagy Carmichael, from the new Paramount film, "A Song Is Born," as balance to the anthology of old favorites.

Other new hit tunes from Hollywood and Tin Pan Alley to be featured are "Could You Pass in Love?" from Sonja Henie's latest flicker, "My Lucky Star"; "Bewildered," a ballad by Teddy Powell and Leonard Whitcup, and "No Wonder," a brand new tune by Buddy Bernier and Bob Emmerich.

SCARLET FEVER STRIKES TWO IN COMMERCIAL PT.

Harold, 10, and Richard Lawless 8, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Orran

Lawless, Commercial Point, are ill of scarlet fever. The home has been placed under quarantine.

Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner, said pupils of the first to the fifth grades at the Commercial Point school will be given daily examinations during the next week. He urged parents not to keep their children out of school unless they were ill. Every precaution will be taken to prevent further cases, Dr. Blackburn said.

ROYALTY IN AUSTRALIA

THE appointment of the Duke of Kent, youngest brother of King George VI, as governor-general of Australia, looks like a good way of finding something useful for British royalty to do. And Kent, a royal playboy, needs work.

It is an interesting innovation. It is also evidence of the worry felt throughout the British Empire at the encroachments of dictators in Europe and Asia, and of the need of Englishmen everywhere snuggling up together.

The Duke, handsome, democratic and popular, will doubtless make a hit with the Australians. They will like him for himself and as a symbol of empire. He will bring the sentimental home of all Britons a little nearer.

The duties of a governor-general, other than social, are not great. He serves as a direct link between the British throne and the self-governing dominions, a sort of viceroy, acting in the King-Emperor's place, having little actual authority but much prestige and influence.

Germany and Japan will take due notice, realizing that Britain means to stand by Australia (and New Zealand and adjoining possessions) and vice versa. Japan especially has been encroaching on British trade and prestige in southern China in an alarming way and is suspected of further territorial ambitions. Australia has recently embarked on a $200,000,000 armament program.

The United States, occupying the Philippines, about midway between Japan and Australia, takes due notice, and our islanders there may feel reassured.

FOR A LITERATE NAVY

A FEW months ago an order went out from the Navy Department at Washington requiring every ensign to read six books during the first eighteen months after his graduation from the Naval Academy at Annapolis. Now that order is supplemented by a list of 100 approved works in history, science, economics, fine arts and a few other classifications.

This is all very interesting, and at least a part of the public would be glad to know more about it. Don't the middies ever read any good books while in school? What books are on the approved list, and who approved them? Have naval officers been conspicuous for their lack of literary interests? What result is expected from the compulsory reading? Will there be occasional examinations to discover how thorough the reading is?

Finally, can you make a person read by leading him to a library?

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN,

GOVERNMENT HAS SETTLED SUITS

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department secretly is ready to announce out-of-court settlement of the monopoly indictments against the Ford and Chrysler motor companies.

With General Motors, the two firms were indicted by a federal grand jury in South Bend, Ind., last spring on charges of violating the anti-trust laws through illegal relations with auto finance corporations. Shortly thereafter Donald R. Richberg, former NRA head representing Ford, and William Stanley, ex-Assistant Attorney General and counsel for Chrysler, opened negotiations with the Justice Department for an amicable settlement.

An agreement has been reached, and it will be made public as a "consent decree" this week. Ford and Chrysler agree to sever all connections with finance firms, in exchange for the Government abandoning its prosecution.

The case against General Motors will go to trial, as it has refused to make any concessions.

STICKLER

Frederick A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt and chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is very particular about his name.

A young reporter, new to Washington, addressed him as "Mr. De-lane-o." Quick as a flash Uncle Fred, as the President calls him, broke in.

"Young man," he said sternly, "the name is Delano."

WAR POWER

There is much more to the national defense plan for power expansion than was made public by Assistant War Secretary Louis Johnson. His canny announcement did not reveal two secret and sensational details:

First, that the nation's power facilities today are far below security needs. Second, that the power plan is designed to do for American industry what the armament and training programs will do for the Army and Navy—place it in a state of preparedness to meet any emergency.

Lack of power sufficient to operate industry at a maximum was one of this country's little known but greatest weaknesses during the World War. As a member of the Wilson Cabinet, Roosevelt had first hand experience with it. He is determined that the U. S. shall not again be faced with this fatal pitfall in the event of another conflict.

Even more than in 1918, war today requires industry geared to utmost capacity. With existing power facilities, a war would demand drastic, demoralizing curtailment of the use of electricity in homes and business establishments, and the utilization of antiquated and widely dispersed plants, at excessive cost, to produce vital military materials.

The object of the power plan is to eliminate this menacing weakness. At the same time a very important result of the large scale expansion will be a powerful shot in the arm to heavy industry, long a laggard, that will be felt in every line of business.

Governmental reorganization is certain to be strongly urged again soon after congress next assembly. It isn't exactly correct to call it RE-organization, either. The government isn't organized now and never has been. It would be more accurate to say that the fight will be to OR-ganize (not RE-organize) it. Inasmuch as the best congressional session's plan to organize the bureau was beaten, it might be assumed that there is vigorous opposition to the organization (or reorganization) program. This isn't at all the case. It is agreed, with practical unanimity, that the thing needs to be organized. The last session's objection was not to organization, but to the kind of organization that President Roosevelt favored.

COMMISSIONS, BOARDS, BUREAUS

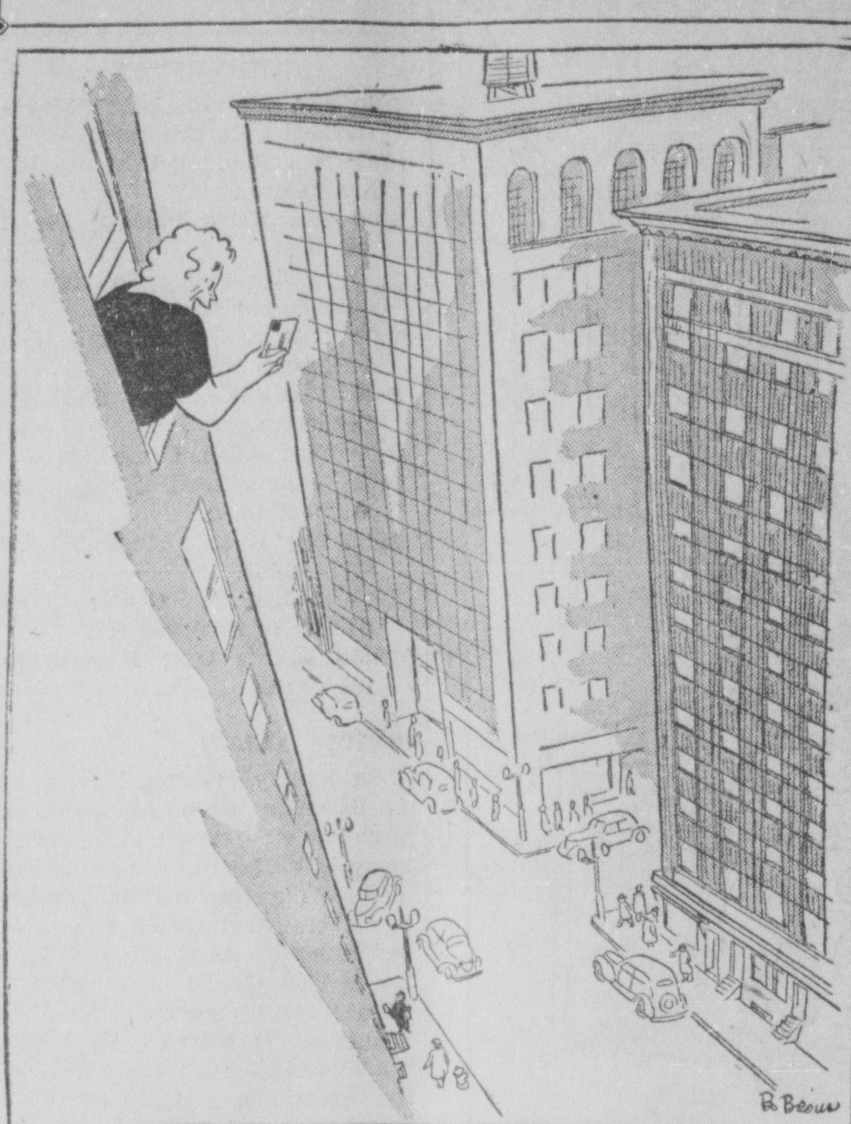

The United States started off with very few so-called "independent offices," such as clutter up Washington at present. With time's passage a succession of problems began to present themselves which congress didn't have the leisure to bother with. Consequently, it began the creation, now and then, of a commission, a board, a bureau or some such thing, to specialize on these various puzzles. For example, years ago, as the railroad situation started to become complicated, the Interstate Commerce Commission was legislated into existence. These outfits were supposed to be answerable to congress; not to the President. Illustratively, the accountant general's job specifically was made irremovable by the White House. Congress could remove him, by impeachment, but the President couldn't, under any circumstances. Which just goes to show how jealous congress was of its authority.

It was all very well for while "independent offices" were not so numerous. But today there are hard onto 100 of them. Many were created to deal with temporary emergencies, which have passed, and these special bodies ought to be abolished. Jurisdictions and duties overlap; they're wasteful and confusing. Yet it's next to impossible to terminate a federal group, once initiated; there are jobs and salaries in it—and congressmen want them for patronage purposes.

Inside the cabinet departments, too, there is redundancy. For instance, there are legislators who think the war and navy department could be compacted into one.

Prevention of Colds by Local Immunity

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

VACCINES as a preventive of colds have been praised and condemned by one party or another ever since they were introduced. My own feeling would be that they are of no value. Then just as I am sure of that, I hear of some person who has taken a series of "shots" in the fall and has gone all through the winter without a cold, and I have to modify my position.

There is really no reason why vaccines should prevent colds. For a vaccine to work it must be made up of the dead germs of the disease they are trying to prevent. These dead germs, injected in the body, are dissolved by the blood and an immunity is set up against them just as if they were the live germs of the disease. We can produce immunity to typhoid fever this way because we know the exact germ which causes typhoid, and because its chemistry is so simple that one set of germs will confer immunity against all the typhoid germs in the world.

Don't Know Germ

None of these things is true of the cold vaccines. We do not know the germ that causes cold. We are certain, in fact, that the germs used in cold vaccines are not the primary cause of the common cold. The common cold is probably caused by a filterable virus. After the virus has entered the mucosa of the nose, that mucosa is more easily invaded by a number of secondary organisms. Those are the ones that cause the secretion and other late manifestations. Those are the ones that are in cold vaccines. They may confer immunity to the secondary infections, but not to the primary one. Perhaps, however, we have been going about the thing entirely the wrong way—by injecting the vaccine underneath the skin. Perhaps the place to confer immunity is on the membrane of the nose itself. Perhaps, if we create a local immunity in the nose, we can prevent colds and other respiratory infections.

Such an idea is suggested by Walsh and Cannon at the University of Chicago.

What They Found

Working on rabbits with Type I. pneumonia germs, they found that by introducing virulent germs into the nose, they produced a fatal result in 90 per cent of cases. When, however, they used a killed culture of pneumococcus Type I. over and over again, and then introduced the virulent germs, they had no deaths. They had produced complete immunity against intranasal infection.

The investigators are inclined to interpret these results as meaning that in many respiratory infections, the real immunity which prevents the invasion is a local one developed in the nasal mucosa. They conclude that "regional vaccination would seem the preferable method of elevating the level of resistance of tissue at the portal of entry to the body."

All this is still in the experimental stage, but it gives food for thought.

AN EXPERT'S MEASURE

WILL MY HAND probably produce a game if my partner is too weak to answer a bid of one? If the answer is yes, an expert will make a two bid which is forcing to game. If it is no, if a game is not in sight unless the partner is strong enough to answer a one bid, the expert bids only one. All the formulae in the world can give you no better measure than that to distinguish between hands justifying openings of one or two.

The bidding on this deal began by North calling 2-Spades, to which South responded with 2-No Trump. North next bid 3-Diamonds and allowed the contract to stand at 3-No Trump, which was South's next response.

The heart Q was led by West, covered by dummy's K and won with East's A. The heart 2 was returned and won by West, who cashed three more heart tricks. West returned the spade 10, on took with his K. He came back with a spade and the 8 forced the A. Declarer then cashed the clubs A and K and covered the J with the Q to enter his hand to try the diamond finesse. This play also lost to East, who took the spade J. The result was that declarer lost five hearts, two spades and one diamond.

South criticized North severely for his optimism in making a two bid. North retorted that he had sufficient high cards to do so but he failed to realize that what he was lacking was playing tricks.

ROMANCE IN C

BY OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young widow, creates a furore on the campus of Rice Institute, in Texas, when she erects a sign in front of her cottage announcing "COUNSEL IN ROMANCE". Her plan is to help guide 100 student "members" in their social and love affairs for a small fee. Bob Towne, campus football hero, attracted by Sara Sue, is the first to enroll. This enrages Peaches Pomeroy, a senior, who regarded herself as "Bob's girl" the previous year. Worthington Gurley, unprepossessing freshman, provides another interesting problem for Sara Sue. But the climax in her Cottage Plan occurs when Dr. Thornton Holgate, new member of the faculty, begs Sara Sue to help him. . . then confides he has fallen in love with Peaches Pomeroy. Gurley obtains a date with Sara Sue for the freshman ball, which displeases Towne; but Bob accepts it gracefully. Sara Sue finds her affairs growing complicated, but feels much better after confiding her troubles to a close friend, Roxy Fowler.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 10

THE FACULTY meeting of the Rice Institute was called to order at 4 p. m.

First item of business: "Mr. Sam Konomos requests permission to speak to the faculty, sir."

President Edgar Odell Lovett of the Rice Institute looked at his secretary.

"Konomos?"

"Yes, Dr. Lovett. He is proprietor, I believe, of the Houstex Inn, located across Rice boulevard from the campus."

"Um. Well, it is in no way connected with the university, but conceivably Mr. Konomos has legitimate business here. Ask him to come in, please."

Mr. Konomos would have been completely in a snafu inside a prize fight ring. Indeed, he had once been a prize fighter. He weighed 205 pounds, and he was hairy, and his skin was dark, and his nose was flat, which caused him to wheeze a trifle. He smelled a little of alcohol and cheese.

On the other hand, the faculty chamber in the Rice administration building is one of the most beautiful rooms in Texas.

"It is an honor to welcome you, Mr. Konomos," said Dr. Lovett, who is about the most gracious gentleman imaginable. "Will you have this seat, sir?" He indicated a chair, and Sam slid into it, wheezing, glancing right and left.

"I ain't got too much time," Sam began.

"Quite so, sir. We shall endeavor to move swiftly. Proceed."

"It's about this widow, this Davis. She's ruin my business."

Nobody said anything to that. "She's take all the trade," Sam went on. He turned to glare at the professors, instructors and assistants.

"She's come here with soft soap. She put the fresh air in it. She make love with everybody. She's ruin my business, this romance house!" Sam's muscles bulged noticeably and he got up excitedly. "I have been in business three years. Is not fair she cut in?"

There was much more talk, with some questions from the faculty. Nobody voiced an opinion, however, until Mr. Konomos departed.

"So far as I am concerned," one faculty member spoke out then, "I cannot see that it is any affair of ours. But personally I can testify that the Houstex Inn is anything but savory in reputation. I hope she puts him out of business!"

Applause, and smiles, closed the discussion.

Next item of business: Report from Mr. James Britt, football coach.

"I have nothing unusual at this time, gentlemen," said Coach Jimmy, who had just come in. "The squad seems to be progressing nicely. You are already aware of the high interest in football this fall. I am doing everything possible to stress scholarship, as we previously agreed here. If any of my lads show signs of falling down in studies, please let me know promptly and I will take up the matter individually. The team morale seems to be exceptionally good. For one thing, I am getting some valuable cooperation from a person who, it appears, has a rather remarkable personality and influence. It is a Mrs. Davis, a widowed lady, of whom you may have heard elsewhere. She operates a new, ah—service, across Main street. I find her quite a help, when I had feared she might be a distraction."

"She make love with everybody, ha! She is ruin my business."

"Um. Thank you, Jimmy," said Dr. Lovett. "Please meet with us as often as you can."

Next item of business:

"The faculty is herewith presented with a brief written report from Mr. Wasson, the dormitory manager," said Dr. Lovett's secretary. "It reads as follows:

"Gentlemen: "My records for the week show all rooms occupied, three illnesses of which one required hospitalization, and disbursements of $84.75 for supplies and repairs, invoices attached. This is exclusive of the mess hall."

"The general survey indicates, however, some minor disturbances are resulting from students trading in memberships in a new social club. Demand for these memberships, which seem to be limited in number, apparently is very great. Memberships which cost $3 initially have sold for as high as $30 in a few cases. I learned, I will make further investigation, if you so request."

"Respectfully submitted, "JACOB WASSON."

The dean of the institute arose from his chair at this point.

"I move you, sir," he addressed the president, "that Mr. Wasson and the student government counsel be asked to meet at once with a faculty committee to investigate this matter. As you well know, Rice has maintained strict taboo on fraternities, sororities and such social clubs as function in a secret manner, tending to destroy the freedom and democracy we have cherished here. Perhaps it is just some of the new students, not acquainted with our traditions, however, so I think there is no cause for hasty action."

At that juncture Loren Dall Rogers, Ph. D., took the floor. Dr. Rogers, instructor in English literature, was smiling.

"I think I can allay the dean's fears," he announced. "I happen to room in the faculty tower myself, near the students. This 'club' to which Mr. Wasson refers is no threatened secret order, nor fraternity. It is simply the same one already mentioned—the Cottage club, organized by one, Mrs. Sara Sue Davis, who resides across Main boulevard. I have heard innumerable discussion of it in the dormitories. I think the matter will evolve its own solution satisfactorily, but I shall be glad to look into it and report further here."

Next item of business: "A telegram," said the president's secretary, "has come from The New York Journal-American. 'Gentlemen:

"Our Houston correspondent has sent a most interesting article concerning a new Cottage Plan for providing individual and group social life in Rice Institute, sponsored by Sara Sue Davis, a matron. Are we authorized to say that Mrs. Davis is ex-officio a member of the Rice faculty, or that she operates independently, but with your guidance and approval? You can understand how this would have added weight if it carried faculty endorsement, at least. Apparently Mrs. Davis' plan is rather distinctive, in that she offers personal guidance. Eastern colleges have been striving for some means of combating the unwholesome road-house type of social attraction for students, and we are prepared to give full display to Mrs. Davis' enterprise, but would like to have your exact relationship to the plan there."

"The telegram is signed by the managing editor, who requests that we telegraph him a reply, collect," the secretary concluded.

"Um," said Dr. Lovett.

He peered over his spectacles at his colleagues. Could he be detecting twinkles in eyes that normally were serious, dignified?

"Ahem!" the president rumbled it, quite seriously. "It is almost time to adjourn this faculty session, and we seem not to have accomplished a thing. Have you gentlemen observed that every item of business so far has centered around, or at least led up to, some consideration of this Davis woman? Lady, perhaps I should say: I do not know her. I understand she is a widow. One of you mentioned that she is red haired, although what significance that holds in these discussions, I cannot see. But it is true that an entire faculty session must be given over to a young lady in no way connected with this university?"

A youngish looking professor, wearing horn-rimmed spectacles, took the floor.

"Dr. President!"

"Mr. Holgate," the chairman acknowledged him.

"I, of course, lament the crowded condition of our business calendar this afternoon, but I do wish to declare, emphatically, that Mrs. Davis is a most estimable young woman, and one, I think, of extraordinary—"

After considerable further discussion, the faculty meeting of the Rice Institute adjourned at 8 p. m. (To Be Continued)

Many were created to deal with temporary emergencies, which have passed, and these special bodies ought to be abolished. Jurisdictions and duties overlap; they're wasteful and confusing. Yet it's next to impossible to terminate a federal group, once initiated; there are jobs and salaries in it—and congressmen want them for patronage purposes.

Inside the cabinet departments, too, there is redundancy. For instance, there are legislators who think the war and navy departments could be compacted into one.

They were one in the first place. It also is reasoned that the inter-department has outlived its usefulness. As for "independent offices," unquestionably they could be condensed into half their number.

RESENTFUL SENATOR BYRD

Well, Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia was appointed chairman of a congressional committee to recommend governmental reorganization. Casually, I wrote a story to the effect that these reorganization schemes usually contemplate the creation of an additional Cabinet department. The Senator, irritated, wrote me that his committee had discussed no such expansion. He asked me to correct myself. I was in a position to do so.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt had established a commission, principally under the direction of Louis Brownlow, which proposed the creation of TWO new Cabinet departments. I was wrong, all right; it wasn't one. It was two. Furthermore, all these commissions, et cetera, were created by congress. If they're to be scrambled, congress wants to do the scrambling.

On the contrary, President Roosevelt wants to do it, considering congress incompetent—which it is, undoubtedly. Nevertheless—which is the democratic method?

GOVERNMENT HAS SETTLED SUITS

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department secretly is ready to announce out-of-court settlement of the monopoly indictments against the Ford and Chrysler motor companies.

With General Motors, the two firms were indicted by a federal grand jury in South Bend, Ind., last spring on charges of violating the anti-trust laws through illegal relations with auto finance corporations. Shortly thereafter Donald R. Richberg, former NRA head representing Ford, and William Stanley, ex-Assistant Attorney General and counsel for Chrysler, opened negotiations with the Justice Department for an amicable settlement.

An agreement has been reached, and it will be made public as a "consent decree" this week. Ford and Chrysler agree to sever all connections with finance firms, in exchange for the Government abandoning its prosecution.

The case against General Motors will go to trial, as it has refused to make any concessions.

STICKLER

Frederick A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt and chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is very particular about his name.

A young reporter, new to Washington, addressed him as "Mr. De-lane-o." Quick as a flash Uncle Fred, as the President calls him, broke in.

"Young man," he said sternly, "the name is Del-ano."

WAR POWER

There is much more to the national defense plan for power expansion than was made public by Assistant War Secretary Louis Johnson. His canny announcement did not reveal two secret and sensational details:

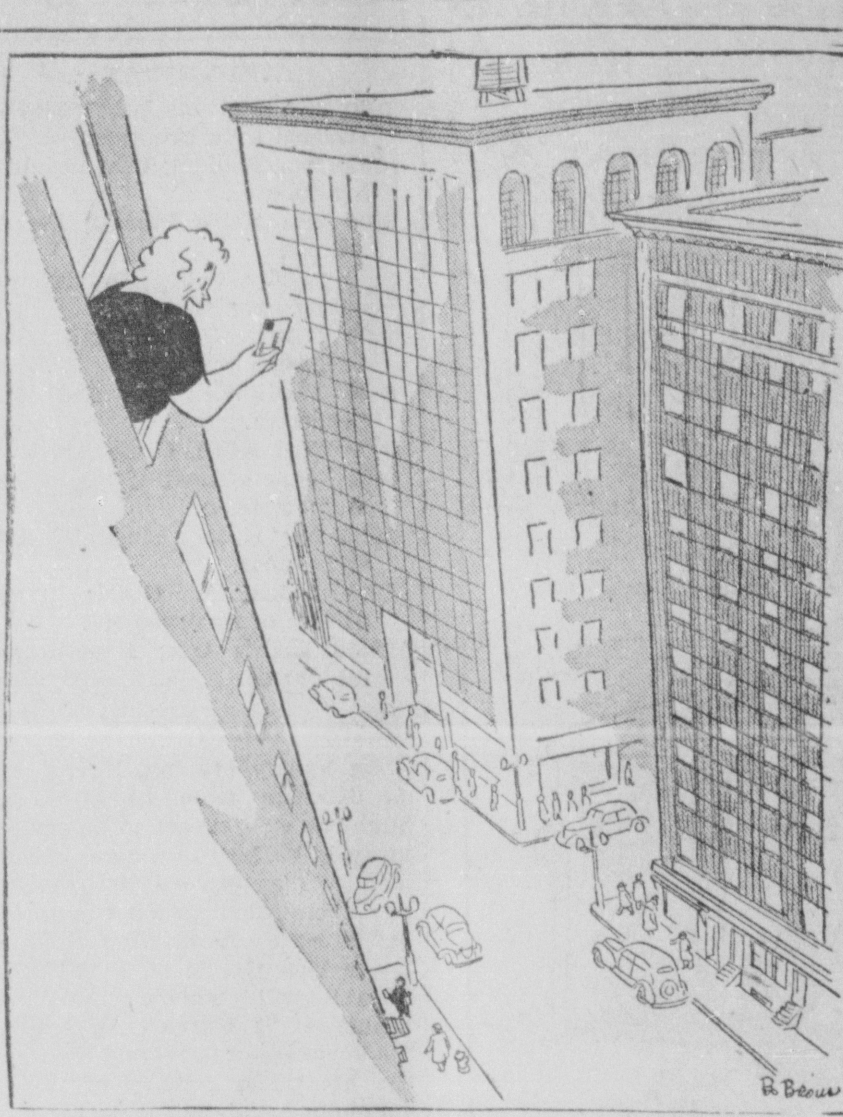

First, that the nation's power facilities today are far below security needs. Second, that the power plan is designed to do for American industry what the armament and training programs will do for the Army and Navy—place it in a state of preparedness to meet any emergency.

Lack of power sufficient to operate industry at a maximum was one of this country's little known but greatest weaknesses during the World War. As a member of the Wilson Cabinet, Roosevelt had first hand experience with it. He is determined that the U. S. shall not again be faced with this fatal pitfall in the event of another conflict.

Even more than in 1918, war today requires industry geared to utmost capacity. With existing power facilities, a war would demand drastic, demoralizing curtailment of the use of electricity in homes and business establishments, and the utilization of antiquated and widely dispersed plants, at excessive cost, to produce vital military materials.

The object of the power plan is to eliminate this menacing weakness. At the same time a very important result of the large scale expansion will be a powerful shot in the arm to heavy industry, long a laggard, that will be felt in every line of business.

Prevention of Colds by Local Immunity

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

VACCINES as a preventive of colds have been praised and condemned by one party or another ever since they were introduced. My own feeling would be that they are of no value. Then just as I am sure of that, I hear of some person who has taken a series of "shots" in the fall and has gone all through the winter without a cold, and I have to modify my position.

There is really no reason why vaccines should prevent colds. For a vaccine to work it must be made up of the dead germs of the disease you are trying to prevent. These dead germs, injected in the body, are dissolved by the blood and an immunity is set up against them, just as if they were the live germs of the disease. We can produce immunity to typhoid fever this way because we know the exact germ which causes typhoid, and because its chemistry is so stable that one set of germs will confer immunity against all the typhoid germs in the world.

Don't Know Germ

None of these things is true of the cold vaccines. We do not know the germ that causes cold. We are certain, in fact, that the germs used in cold vaccines are not the primary cause of the common cold. The common cold is probably caused by a filterable virus. After the virus has entered the mucosa of the nose, that mucosa is more easily invaded by a number of secondary organisms. These are the ones that cause the secretion and other late manifestations. These are the ones that are in cold vaccines. They may confer immunity to the secondary infections, but not to the primary one.

Perhaps, however, we have been going about the thing entirely the wrong way—by injecting the vaccine underneath the skin. Perhaps the place to confer immunity is on the membrane of the nose itself. Perhaps, if we create a local immunity in the nose, we can prevent colds and other respiratory infections.

Such an idea is suggested by Walsh and Cannon at the University of Chicago.

What They Found

Working on rabbits with Type I pneumonia germs, they found that by introducing virulent germs into the nose, they produced a fatal result in 90 per cent of cases. When, however, they used a killed culture of pneumococcus Type I, over and over again, and then introduced the virulent germs, they had no deaths. They had produced complete immunity against intranasal infection.

The investigators are inclined to interpret these results as meaning that in many respiratory infections, the real immunity which prevents the invasion is a local one developed in the nasal mucosa. They conclude that "regional vaccination would seem the preferable method of elevating the level of resistance of tissue at the portal of entry to the body."

All this is still in the experimental stage, but it gives food for thought.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

AN EXPERT'S MEASURE

WILL MY HAND probably produce a game if my partner is too weak to answer a bid of one? If the answer is yes, an expert will make a two bid which is forcing to game. If it is no, if a game is not in sight unless the partner is strong enough to answer a one bid, the expert bids only one. All the formulae in the world can give you no better measure than that to distinguish between hands justifying openings of one or two.

The bidding on this deal began by North calling 2-Spades, to which South responded with 2-No Trump. North next bid 3-Diamonds and allowed the contract to stand at 3-No Trump, which was South's next response.

The heart Q was led by West, covered by dummy's K and won with East's A. The heart 2 was returned and won by West, who cashed three more heart tricks. West returned the spade 10, on which the Q was played and East took with his K. He came back with a spade and the 8 forced the A. Declarer then cashed the clubs A and K and covered the J with the Q to enter his hand to try the diamond finesse. This plan also lost to East, who took the spade J. The result was that declarer lost five hearts, two spades and one diamond.

South criticized North severely for his optimism in making a two bid. North retorted that he had sufficient high cards to do so but he failed to realize that what he was lacking was playing tricks.

ROMANCE IN C

BY OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young widow, creates a furore on the campus of Rice Institute, in Texas, when she erects a sign in front of her cottage announcing "COUNSEL IN ROMANCE." Her plan is to help guide 100 student "members" in their social and love affairs for a small fee. Bob Towne, campus football hero, attracted by Sara Sue, is the first to enroll. This enrages Peaches Pomeroy, a senior, who regarded herself as "Bob's girl" the previous year. Worthington Curley, unprepossessing freshman, provides another interesting problem for Sara Sue. But the climax in her Cottage Plan occurs when Dr. Thornton Holgate, new member of the faculty, begs Sara Sue to help him. . . then confides he has fallen in love with Peaches Pomeroy. Curley obtains a date with Sara Sue for the freshman ball, which displaces Towne but Bob accepts it gracefully. Sara Sue finds her affairs growing complicated, but feels much better after confiding her troubles to a close friend, Roxie Fowell.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 10

THE FACULTY meeting of the Rice Institute was called to order at 4 p. m.

First item of business: "Mr. Sam Konomos requests permission to speak to the faculty, sir."

President Edgar Odell Lovett of the Rice Institute looked at his secretary.

"Konomos?"

"Yes, Dr. Lovett. He is proprietor, I believe, of the Houstex Inn, located across Rice boulevard from the campus."

"Um. Well, it is in no way connected with the university, but conceivably Mr. Konomos has legitimate business here. Ask him to come in, please."

Mr. Konomos would have been completely in atmosphere inside a prize fight ring. Indeed, he had once been prize fighter. He weighed 205 pounds, and he was hairy, and his skin was dark, and his nose was flat, which caused him to wheeze a trifle. He smelled a little of alcohol and cheese.

On the other hand, the faculty chamber in the Rice administration building is one of the most beautiful rooms in Texas.

"It is an honor to welcome you, Mr. Konomos," said Dr. Lovett, who is about the most gracious gentleman imaginable. "Will you have this seat, sir?" He indicated a chair, and Sam slid into it, wheezing, glancing right and left. "I ain't got too much time," Sam began.

"Quite so, sir. We shall endeavor to move swiftly. Proceed."

"It's about this widow, this Davis. She's ruin my business."

Nobody said anything to that.

"She's take all the trade," Sam went on. He turned to glare at the professors, instructors and assistants. "She come here with soft soap. She put up the fresh sign. She make love with everybody. She ruin my business, this romance house. Sam's muscles bulged noticeably and he got up excitedly. "I have been in business three year. Is not fair she cut in!"

There was much more talk, with some questions from the faculty. Nobody voiced an opinion, however, until Mr. Konomos departed. "So far as I am concerned," one faculty member spoke out then, "I cannot see that it is any affair of ours. But personally I can testify that the Houstex Inn is anything but savory in reputation. I hope she puts him out of business!"

Applause, and smiles, closed the discussion.

Next item of business: Report from Mr. James Britt, football coach.

"I have nothing unusual at this time, gentlemen," said Coach Jimmy, who had just come in. "The squad seems to be progressing nicely. You are already aware of the high interest in football this fall. I am doing everything possible to stress scholarship, as we previously agreed here. If any of my lads show signs of falling down in studies, please let me know promptly and I will take up the matter individually. The team morale seems to be exceptionally good. For one thing, I am getting some valuable co-operation from a person who, it appears, has a rather remarkable personality and influence. It is a Mrs. Davis, a widowed lady, of whom you may have heard elsewhere. She operates a new, ah—service—across Main street. I find her quite a help when I had feared she might be a distraction."

"She make love with everybody, ha! She is ruin my business."

"Um. Thank you, Jimmy," said Dr. Lovett. "Please meet with us as often as you can."

Next item of business:

"The faculty is herewith presented with a brief written report from Mr. Wasson, the dormitory manager," said Dr. Lovett's secretary. "It reads as follows:

"Gentlemen:

"My records for the week show all rooms occupied, three illnesses of which one required hospitalization, and disbursements of $54.75 for supplies and repairs, invoices attached. This is exclusive of the mess hall."

"The general survey indicates, however, some minor disturbances are resulting from students trading in memberships in a new social club. Demand for these memberships, which seem to be limited in number, apparently is very great. Memberships which cost $3 initially have sold for as high as $30 in a few cases. I learned, I will make further investigation, if you so request."

"Respectfully submitted, "

"JACOB WASSON."

The dean of the institute arose from his chair at this point. "I move you, sir," he addressed the president, "that Mr. Wasson and the student government counsel be asked to meet at once with a faculty committee to investigate this matter. As you well know, Rice has maintained strict taboo on fraternities, sororities and such social clubs as function in a secret manner, tending to destroy the freedom and democracy we have cherished here. Perhaps it is just some of the new students, not acquainted with our traditions, however, so I think there is no cause for hasty action."

At that juncture Loren Dall Rogers, Ph. D., took the floor. Dr. Rogers, instructor in English literature, was smiling.

"I think I can allay the dean's fears," he announced. "I happen to room in the faculty tower myself, near the students. This 'club' to which Mr. Wasson refers is no threatened secret order, nor fraternity. It is simply the same one already mentioned—the Cottage club, organized by one, Mrs. Sara Sue Davis, who resides across Main boulevard. I have heard interminable discussion of it in the dormitories. I think the matter will evolve its own solution satisfactorily, but I shall be glad to look into it and report further here."

Next item of business: "A telegram," said the president's secretary, "has come from The New York Journal-American.

"Gentlemen:

"Our Houston correspondent has sent a most interesting article concerning a new Cottage Plan for developing individual and group social life in Rice Institute, sponsored by Sara Sue Davis, a matron. Are we authorized to say that Mrs. Davis is ex-officio a member of the Rice faculty, or that she operates independently, but with your guidance and approval? You can understand how this would have added weight if it carried faculty endorsement, at least. Apparently Mrs. Davis' plan is rather distinctive in that she offers personal guidance. Eastern colleges have been striving for some means of combating the unwholesome road-house type of social attraction for students, and we are prepared to give full display to Mrs. Davis' enterprise, but would like to have your exact relationship to the plan there."

"The telegram is signed by the managing editor, who requests that we telegraph him a reply, collect," the secretary concluded.

"Um," said Dr. Lovett.

He peered over his spectacles at his colleagues. Could he be detecting twinkles in eyes that normally were serious, dignified?

"Almighty!" the president rumbled, "quite seriously. 'It is almost time to adjourn this faculty session, and we seem not to have accomplished a thing. Have you gentlemen observed that every item of business so far has centered around, or at least led up to, some consideration of this Davis woman? I don't know, perhaps I should say; I do not know her. I understand she is a widow. One of you mentioned that she is red haired, although what significance that holds in these discussions, I cannot see. But it is true that an entire faculty session must be given over to a young lady in no way connected with this university?"

A youngish looking professor, wearing horn-rimmed spectacles, took the floor.

"Mr. President!"

"Dr. Holgate," the chairman acknowledged him.

"I, of course, lament the crowded condition of our business calendar this afternoon, but I do wish to declare, emphatically, that Mrs. Davis is a most estimable young woman, and one, I think, of extraordinary."

After considerable further discussion, the faculty meeting of the Rice Institute adjourned at 6 p. m.

New Tricks in Style

AMERICAN women think that all glittering fabrics are just dandy, and it certainly is a fact that they wear them better than do their foreign cousins. There is something about our slick grooming that permits us to wear such lushness quite casually, without looking overdressed and affected.

Newest trick in lame treatment this season is the straight tailoring of the stuff, a natural evolution, after all, from the lame cocktail blouse which has gone about with our dressier suits for some years past.

Sketched today are two of the latest models. At the left is a two-fabric design, the blouse made of dull gold lame with a hint of black in its weave, the skirt a rich velvet that is pleated all around. The neckline is soft and flattering. The sleeves have a lot of trapezoid-type elaboration. All in all, it is a swell "table top" outfit.

At the right is a shirtmaker in lame—for goodness' sake!—its classic lines developed in a cheerful red and silver lame. Lucky ladies who belong to clubs will appreciate these practical but dressy costumes.

In addition to Mrs. Watts, others present from Circleville were the Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Bowman, Mrs. Alfred Lee, Miss Estella Grimes, Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. Clarence Barnhart, Mrs. J. H. Adkins, Miss Mattie Gearhart and Mrs. F. E. Barnhill.

Anagram Parties

The members of the first division of the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist Episcopal church under the leadership of Mrs. Stanley Glick, chairman, entertained at two anagram parties, Tuesday, at the Glick home in Circleville township.

The two large living rooms and the dining room of the home were attractively arranged for the affair, large vases of vari-colored hardy chrysanthemums forming the decorations.

Ninety-eight guests were engaged in the games of anagrams, during the afternoon, with the prize won by Mrs. Leo McClure. The door prize at this time was won by Mrs. Dwight Steele.

In the evening, 14 tables progressed, the high score trophy being won by Mrs. George Steeley. John Maddux received the door prize.

At the conclusion of both parties, a salad lunch was served at the small tables by Mrs. Glick and her assistants. The affairs were successful both socially and financially.

About 25 members attended the November meeting of the Westminster Bible class, Tuesday evening, at the home of Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, W. Union street. Mrs. Marvin Steeley, Mrs. Orin W. Dreisbach and Mrs. E. E. Porter were assisting hostesses.

During the business meeting plans were discussed for planting a tree in front of the manse. It was decided to have the annual Christmas party at the next social session of the club. Members are requested to take dressed dolls to this meeting to be given to the

For Wednesday, November 2

A RATHER negative day, as far as business or occupation is concerned, is indicated by the astral operations. Probable anxieties, delays, difficulties or a bereavement seem to afflict the personal life. There are omens of difficulties, vexations or even financial loss or litigation, which is connected in some manner with writings, documents or contracts. Be cautious with these. Bad judgment and distorted views may menace, precipitating adverse situations.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year in which a personal affliction or misfortune may upset business calculations or cause bungling or confusion in every day affairs. There is danger of anxiety, vexation, delays and difficulties, even a deep sorrow, and at the same time papers, writings, contracts or documents have power to cause loss or litigation. Unsound judgment or exaggerated views may be at the root of this distress, so be careful and conservative, and don't jump at conclusions.

A child born on this day may have a mild, friendly and sympathetic nature, but it may be prone to jump at conclusions, lack clear judgment and so invite irritating and disagreeable contacts.

'BISCUIT STANDS ALONE, WINNER OVER ADMIRAL

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 2 — (UP)—Seabiscuit, the cast-off son of a cheaply held father, today stood unchallenged as America's greatest race horse.

Sold by the Wheatley stable three years ago because he had a bad knee and was thought to be through, the bay son of Hard Tack banded down the stretch at Pimlico yesterday to beat War Admiral by four lengths and become supreme in this country.

Charlie Howard bought Seabiscuit from Ogden Mills in August, 1935. The price was $7,500. Counting the $15,000 first money in yesterday's match race Seabiscuit has banked more than $340,000 for Howard, and now only Sun Beau stands between him and the honor of being the greatest money winner in American turf history.

Not bad for a cast-off. In War Admiral he faced a "scat" starter, a horse that fairly bullets from the barrier, takes the lead and keeps dust in the eyes of his challengers—usually. But the Admiral had never before stood side by side at the barrier with the Biscuit. And to everybody's surprise—everybody's except Jockey George Woolf's—it was Seabiscuit who broke first, broke like a frightened thing, winging away with a burst of speed that put him in front by a length before the three-sixteenths pole was reached. He never was behind, though he did not lead all the way. For half a mile—from a point in the back-stretch to the top of the stretch—War Admiral looked him in the eye and ran as close to him as the minute hand to the hour hand at twelve noon. It was in this run, side by side, that Seabiscuit proved his superiority over the Admiral. Because when the two horses came out of this gripping drive at the top of the stretch and leaved off for home, Seabiscuit had enough left to carry on, to barrel it down to the wire. War Admiral didn't.

New Tricks in Style

AMERICAN women think that all glittering fabrics are just dandy, and it certainly is a fact that they wear them better than do their foreign cousins. There is something about our slick grooming that permits us to wear such lushness quite casually, without looking overdressed and affected.

Newest trick in lame treatment this season is the straight tailoring of the stuff, a natural evolution, after all, from the lame cocktail blouse which has gone about with our dressier suits for some years past.

Sketched today are two of the latest models. At the left is a two-fabric design, the blouse made of dull gold lame with a hint of black in its weave, the skirt a rich velvet that is pleated all around. The neckline is soft and flattering. The sleeves have a lot of trapezium-type elaboration. All in all, it is a swell "table top" outfit.

At the right is a shirtmaker in lame—for goodness' sake!—its classic lines developed in a cheerful red and silver lame. Lucky ladies who belong to clubs will appreciate these practical but dressy costumes.

of the East Broad street M. E. church of Columbus.

Mrs. Holloway talked on "Methods," enlarging on them in connection with the work of the society for the year.

In addition to Mrs. Watts, others present from Circleville were the Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Bowman, Mrs. Alfred Lee, Miss Estella Grimes, Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. Clarence Barnhart, Mrs. J. H. Adkins, Miss Mattie Gearhart and Mrs. F. E. Barnhill.

Anagram Parties

The members of the first division of the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist Episcopal church under the leadership of Mrs. Stanley Glick, chairman, entertained at two anagram parties, Tuesday, at the Glick home in Circleville township.

The two large living rooms and the dining room of the home were attractively arranged for the affair, large vases of varicolored hardy chrysanthemums forming the decorations.

Ninety-eight guests were engaged in the games of anagrams, during the afternoon, with the prize won by Mrs. Leo McClure. The door prize at this time was won by Mrs. Dwight Steele.

In the evening, 14 tables progressed, the high score trophy being won by Mrs. George Steele. John Maddux received the door prize.

At the conclusion of both parties, a salad lunch was served at the small tables by Mrs. Glick and her assistants. The affairs were successful both socially and financially.

Westminster Class Party
About 25 members attended the November meeting of the Westminster Bible class, Tuesday evening, at the home of Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, W. Union street. Mrs. Marvin Steele, Mrs. Orin W. Dreisbach and Mrs. E. E. Porter were assisting hostesses.

During the business meeting plans were discussed for planting a tree in front of the manse. It was decided to have the annual Christmas party at the next social session of the club. Members are requested to take dressed dolls to this meeting to be given to the

District Missionary Meeting
Mrs. C. C. Watts of E. Main street, president of the Chillicothe District of the Women's Home Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church, led the meetings of the annual Fall conference which was held Tuesday at the First Methodist Episcopal church, Lancaster.

Dartmouth Star Quits, Joins Religious Colony

HANOVER, Mass., Nov. 2.—(UP)—Classmates of Harrington K. Gates, backfield player, on Dartmouth university's undefeated football team, said today the reason he had withdrawn from school and joined a religious colony probably was that he had objected to the "commercialism of college football" and to the profanity he heard in the dressing rooms.

Gates, 24, a student from Saugus, Mass., disappeared from his rooms here Sunday shortly after he returned with the team from New Haven, Conn., where it defeated Yale.

Saturday. He was found yesterday at the colony of the "Legion of God," at Amherst.

He had been traced through a letter of resignation received by Dean Lloyd K. Neidinger on Monday. The dean, accompanied by two of Gates' closest friends, went to the colony to plead with him to return and complete his senior year at the university. Gates refused, saying he feared he could not resist the temptation to play football again, the dean reported.

Gates had joined the cult in his sophomore year, two years ago, but he had not let religious scruples against football interfere with his playing until this year.

He was a star of the team during his sophomore and junior years. This year he decided to give up the game. He did not report for practice until last Wednesday, during the height of training for the Yale game.

Coach Earl Blaik, fearing that other players might resent Gates' joining the team at that late date in the season, polled them on the subject. All the players were enthusiastic over accepting Gates.

He played half the game against Yale, which Dartmouth won, 24-6. Then he disappeared. Neidinger attributed Gates' actions to his "complete allegiance" to the cult, called "The Holy Ghost and Us Society."

Other students, however, told of Gates' frequent protests against profanity to which he was subjected on the playing field and in the locker rooms, and said the commercialization of the game also had displeased him.

Coach Blaik said: "He is a great football player, and a fine boy. It's a shame we have to lose him. I realize that he is deeply religious, but I also hate to see him abandon a most promising football career."

Circleville high school at last had a game on the right side of the victory column Wednesday after winning a 6-0 practice fray from Bob Terhune's Clarksburg team.

The reserves and freshmen represented the Red and Black, Bob Owens being the only first stringer to be used.

The Tiger touchdown came in the third period when Harold Smith took the ball from center and sneaked through the center of the line for the points. A pass for extra point failed.

Clarksburg, though inexperienced, looked good at times and put up a good game. After, tall full-back, did most of the gaining for his team. The fact that the field, soaked by accident Monday night when a tap remained open, was slippery hurt the Clarksburg chances, the visiting lads playing in 6-man football shoes on which rubber cleats are used.

Coaches Black, Armstrong and Terhune officiating the game.

Harold Smith's running featured the contest.

The Tiger varsity ran through signal drill during the evening with the tackling and blocking dummies being used for a while. The team goes to Washington C. H. Thursday evening.

Moore Harden, scrappy guard who has been out of action since the first game when he suffered a splintered leg bone, played part of the time with the reserves Tuesday and indicated that he is ready for service.

LECTURER SEES HOLY LAND AS HAVEN FOR OPPRESSED JEWS

JUDGE CRABITES CITES REASONS FOR ARAB CRISIS

250 In Audience For Third Of Rotary Club's Addresses

Settlement of differences between Jews and Arabs of Jerusalem will be the salvation of two and a half million Jews of Eastern and Central Europe.

This was the opinion of Judge Pierre Crabites, professor of law at the University of Louisiana, who spoke Tuesday night in the high school auditorium in the third number of the Institute of International Understanding sponsored by the Circleville Rotary club.

The speaker contended that the differences of the races has blocked relief to the suffering Jews of Europe. Jews and Arabs, he contended, can get along together if politicians and others leave them alone. "They lived together under friendly relations for 1300 years until 1920," he said.

All Ports Closed

No country, he explained, will open its portals to the oppressed Jews of Europe. The land large enough and fertile enough to absorb them is Mohammedan land.

The speaker pointed out that the Arab looks on the Holy Land as being as much his Holy Land as that of anyone else. Arabs believe England is pouring Jews into Palestine to overcome the Arab majority. The Arabs, he explained, are fighting against being turned into a minority. "If the Jews will make peace with the Arabs, the Jews will have a haven of safety in the Mohammedan countries," he declared.

Judge Crabites, lecturer and author, spent 25 years in the Near East as judge of the Cairo, Egypt, International Tribunal, under appointment of President Taft in 1911.

About 250 persons attended the lecture. The final of the series will be heard next Tuesday night.

CZECH CUSTOMS OFFICERS SLAIN IN ARMED CLASH

PRAGUE Czechoslovakia, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Army dispatches announced today that two Czechoslovak customs officials were killed and two gendarmes wounded when 30 Polish terrorists tried to dynamite a bridge near the village of Volova in the district of Vucov, Ruthenia.

The incident occurred when a Czechoslovak customs patrol yesterday surprised the terrorists placing explosives under the bridge, part of which was damaged. The dispatch added that "150 Polish terrorists crossed the frontier into Ruthenia during the last few days."

Another army dispatch from Ruthenia reported an incident between Hungarian irregulars and Czechoslovak gendarmes in the village of Mocol, near Berehovo, in which the terrorists were alleged to have used hand grenades and machine guns.

The ministry of national defense announced today that the Czechoslovak casualty list in the shooting between German and Czechoslovak patrols in Moravia on Sunday showed two soldiers killed and one officer and seven soldiers wounded.

Philatelist by Luck

NEW ORLEANS (UP)—Herbert Herst, Jr., of New York City said during the American Philatelic convention here that it was luck that put him in the stamp collecting business. While working for a bond firm, Herst, an amateur stamp collector, was looking over a dealer's collection and found a valuable stamp. He bought it for $3, paid $100 more for a bill of sale and later sold it for $3,450.

along with Miller but was released with a note to the family demanding $25,000 ransom.

$13,000 in Garbage Can

The Miller family agreed to pay $13,000, according to Hoover, and dropped the money into a garbage can. Miller then was released.

Hoover gave no details of the manner in which the four men were arrested. He said the arrests took place over the week-end. Some of them confessed, he said.

"Certain confessions were made," Hoover said, "and certain identifications, both of persons in custody and of voices of those who guarded the victims during their confinement."

He said federal authorities had no jurisdiction to prosecute any of the cases.

The G-men entered the case because Fried's disappearance. Under the Lindbergh law a lapse of seven days allows the assumption that the victim had been taken across a state line. In the other kidnappings the negotiations were completed quickly.

Fried, 32, was manager of the Bronx plant of the Colonial Sand and Stone company. Hoover said that the kidnappers first intended to seize Fried's brother. He did not explain why their plans were changed.

Death Unexplained

Neither did Hoover explain why the kidnappers had shot Fried even before the ransom negotiations were broken off.

Mrs. Harold Daniels, of White Plains, Fried's sister, said that his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Fried, and her child, Arlen, 9, had not been informed of the arrests.

Fried was with his wife, his sister and brother-in-law, Harold Daniels, New York City building financier, the night he disappeared. Mrs. Emma Fried, mother of Fried, was ill. Mrs. Daniels said she feared to communicate any development in the case to her, lest the shock affect her adversely.

In the other cases things went more smoothly for the kidnappers, although Miller was able to give evidence that trapped them.

Miller told federal authorities that he had been blindfolded but that he felt the walls of the lodge hall for possible identification marks, studied the voices of his captors and listened to noises. When he entered the hall he noted that a radio was playing "A Tisket, A Tasket."

The G-men established how far the kidnappers could travel in the time Miller estimated he had been traveling. They checked with radio stations and found the one and the time when the song was broadcast.

Miller also noted church bells were in the neighborhood, heard pool balls clicking and determined that the sound of assembled people led him to believe he was in a lodge hall.

Federal agents, after checking 700 billiard parlors and 200 churches, finally reached the Ukrainian hall. Miller identified steps leading to a door in the room where he had been kept prisoner and also some of the physical peculiarities of the room.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(UP)—For the third time in his career James Emory Fox, cherubic first baseman of the Boston Red Sox, has been named the most valuable player in the American league, it was announced today by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

ROACH POWDER KILLS INMATES OF INSTITUTION

COLUMBUS, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The two inmates of the state institution for feeble-minded here who died suddenly Monday were poisoned by cockroach powder which an attendant mistakenly used for baking soda. Dr. F. L. Keyser, superintendent of the institution, said in a written report today to Mrs. Margaret Allman, state welfare director.

The victims were Miss Pauline Branicki, 24, of Cleveland, who became ill about 4 p. m. Monday and died about an hour later, and Miss Virginia Anderson, 32, of Guernsey county, who became ill Sunday night, recovered and then collapsed early Monday.

Dr. Keyser told Mrs. Allman that his investigation revealed that an attendant had gotten cockroach powder by mistake when she went to one of the storage rooms to get baking soda with which to make cookies for a Halloween party Monday night.

The victims were employed in the kitchen and were believed to have sampled the cookies, containing the poison, while they were being baked.

Mrs. Allman suspended the attendant, and sent Charles R. Sharp, superintendent of institutions, and P. E. Boucher, superintendent of food and equipment in the welfare department, to the institution to make a further investigation.

She also criticized Dr. Keyser for permitting the storing of poison along with cooking ingredients.

illard officials but from city and county officials, "as well as many citizen groups."

The strike was called by the Pioneer Tobacco Workers, a Committee for Industrial Organization union, on Oct. 3 when collective bargaining negotiations failed. An attempt to operate the plant with non-striking employees last week was blocked by pickets.

The governor said that only 200 out of 1100 employees of the plant are C. I. O. members.

Adjutant General Emil F. Marx announced that orders to "stand by" had been issued to company commanders and that about 500 men could be sent to Middletown "if necessary", including four rifle companies, one machine gun company, and a headquarters detachment. They could be moved by motor truck.

In his statement, the governor said that "a reign of terror" has been started in Middletown and that rights of non-union employees have been violated. He said there was not question of wages or hours but merely "the closed shop and the check-off which means that every employee will have to pay tribute to John Lewis."

JAPANESE PLAN NEW FAR EAST ECONOMIC PACT

TOKYO, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The government today declared its determination to found "a new order" in East Asia for the purpose of uniting Japan, China and Manchukuo in a political and economic bloc opposed to Communism and possibly aimed at renunciation of the nine power treaty.

The official government statement did not clarify Japan's intentions toward the nine power virtually secret negotiations between Harry Bennett, Ford personnel director, and U. A. W. President Homer Martin.

Martin has said that he would seek a 65 cents an hour minimum wage in the parts plants. Bennett told reporters that "where it is any of our business, we will go along with any plan for stabilizing wages and working conditions."

"Our purchasing department has been instructed not to favor parts manufacturers with low wage rates at the expense of competitors with higher wage scales and better working conditions," Bennett said.

But any plans for cooperation between Ford and the U. A. W. remained a mystery to most of the board members already in Washington. Another committee was drafting a national policy for a coordinated organizational campaign to bring 140,000 Ford employees from coast to coast into the Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate.

Some of Martin's better foes on the U. A. W. board appeared irked by Martin's secret negotiations with Bennett and his brief meeting with Henry Ford without the presence of other C. I. O. or U. A. W. leaders. They said that their only knowledge of the events had come from newspaper accounts.

treaty or the "open door" policy other than to say that the government was "confident" foreign powers would adapt their attitude to the "new conditions."

But a foreign office spokesman expressed the personal and unofficial opinion that no portion of East Asia should be under western influence, thus indicating a possible expectation that the nine power treaty would be revised.

Under the nine power treaty, the United States, Great Britain, France, Japan and other nations involved guaranteed the sovereignty of China and agreed to maintain the "open door" policy of trade. The "open door" policy means that all foreign powers would be on an equal basis in China trade, but recently there have been mounting American and British complaints that Japan has closed the door in areas dominated by Japanese troops.

Taft Expenses Cited

Sen. Robert J. Bulkley in a Toledo speech accused his Republican challenger, Robert A. Taft, of not submitting all current campaign expense accounts promptly in order to minimize total cost.

He said that although Taft had filed an account of about $25,000 since the primary, "we know, of course, that expenditures have been held back in order to permit him to make a modest showing."

He ridiculed Republican statements that economic conditions have not materially improved under the Roosevelt administration and repeated earlier charges that Taft misrepresented his votes in the senate on important legislation.

An attack on James Metzbaum Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, was delivered in Cleveland, Metzbaum's home town by Paul M. Herbert, the Republican candidate, who accused Metzbaum, of "ducking" roll calls in the Ohio senate on relief legislation, old age pensions, public works and schools.

WRIT HEARING DELAYED

Hearing on the application for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Albert Matson, 44, of 374 Wilson avenue, Columbus, scheduled for Wednesday in Common Pleas court, was postponed due to a Columbus attorney being unable to be present. COURT IN SESSION

The district Court of Appeals came to Circleville, Wednesday afternoon, to consider the case of William A. CZECH CUSTOMS OFFICERS SLAIN IN ARMED CLASH

PRAGUE Czechoslovakia, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Army dispatches announced today that two Czechoslovak customs officials were killed and two gendarmes wounded when 30 Polish terrorists tried to dynamite a bridge near the village of Volova in the district of Vucov, Ruthenia.

The incident occurred when a Czechoslovak customs patrol yesterday surprised the terrorists placing explosives under the bridge, part of which was damaged. The dispatch added that "150 Polish terrorists crossed the frontier into Ruthenia during the last few days."

Another army dispatch from Ruthenia reported an incident between Hungarian irregulars and Czechoslovak gendarmes in the village of Mocol, near Berehovo, in which the terrorists were alleged to have used hand grenades and machine guns.

The ministry of national defense announced today that the Czechoslovak casualty list in the shooting between German and Czechoslovak patrols in Moravia on Sunday showed two soldiers killed and one officer and seven soldiers wounded.

HOOVER CLAIMS ABDUCTED MAN SLAIN, BURNED

Ex-Convicts Under Arrest In New York After Quiet Investigations

$13,000 in Garbage Can The Miller family agreed to pay $13,000, according to Hoover, and dropped the money into a garbage can. Miller then was released.

Hoover gave no details of the manner in which the four men were arrested. He said the arrests took place over the week-end. Some of them confessed, he said.

"Certain confessions were made," Hoover said, "and certain identifications, both of persons in custody and of voices of those who guarded the victims during their confinement."

He said federal authorities had no jurisdiction to prosecute any of the cases.

The G-men entered the case because Fried's disappearance. Under the Lindbergh law a lapse of seven days allows the assumption that the victim had been taken across a state line. In the other kidnappings the negotiations were completed quickly.

Fried, 32, was manager of the Bronx plant of the Colonial Sand and Stone company. Hoover said that the kidnappers first intended to seize Fried's brother. He did not explain why their plans were changed.

Death Unexplained

Neither did Hoover explain why the kidnappers had shot Fried even before the ransom negotiations were broken off.

Mrs. Harold Daniels, of White Plains, Fried's sister, said that his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Fried, and her child, Arlen, 9, had not been informed of the arrests.

Fried was with his wife, his sister and brother-in-law, Harold Daniels, New York City building financier, the night he disappeared. Mrs. Emma Fried, mother of Fried, was ill. Mrs. Daniels said she feared to communicate any development in the case to her, lest the shock affect her adversely.

In the other cases things went more smoothly for the kidnappers, although Miller was able to give evidence that trapped them.

Miller told federal authorities that he had been blindfolded but that he felt the walls of the lodge hall for possible identification marks, studied the voices of his captors and listened to noises. When he entered the hall he noted that a radio was playing "A Tisket, A Tasket."

The G-men established how far the kidnappers could travel in the time Miller estimated he had been traveling. They checked with radio stations and found the one and the time when the song was broadcast.

Miller also noted church bells were in the neighborhood, heard pool balls clicking and determined that the sound of assembled people led him to believe he was in a lodge hall.

Federal agents, after checking 700 billiard parlors and 200 churches, finally reached the Ukrainian hall. Miller identified steps leading to a door in the room where he had been kept prisoner and also some of the physical peculiarities of the room.

ROACH POWDER KILLS INMATES OF INSTITUTION

COLUMBUS, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The two inmates of the state institution for feeble-minded here who died suddenly Monday were poisoned by cockroach powder which an attendant mistakenly used for baking soda. Dr. F. L. Keyser, superintendent of the institution, said in a written report today to Mrs. Margaret Allman, state welfare director.

The victims were Miss Pauline Branicki, 24, of Cleveland, who became ill about 4 p. m. Monday and died about an hour later, and Miss Virginia Anderson, 32, of Guernsey county, who became ill Sunday night, recovered and then collapsed early Monday.

Dr. Keyser told Mrs. Allman that his investigation revealed that an attendant had gotten cockroach powder by mistake when she went to one of the storage rooms to get baking soda with which to make cookies for a Halloween party Monday night.

The victims were employed in the kitchen and were believed to have sampled the cookies, containing the poison, while they were being baked.

Mrs. Allman suspended the attendant, and sent Charles R. Sharp, superintendent of institutions, and P. E. Boucher, superintendent of food and equipment in the welfare department, to the institution to make a further investigation.

She also criticized Dr. Keyser for permitting the storing of poison along with cooking ingredients.

The strike was called by the Pioneer Tobacco Workers, a Committee for Industrial Organization union, on Oct. 3 when collective bargaining negotiations failed. An attempt to operate the plant with non-striking employees last week was blocked by pickets.

The governor said that only 200 out of 1100 employees of the plant are C. I. O. members.

Adjutant General Emil F. Marx announced that orders to "stand by" had been issued to company commanders and that about 500 men could be sent to Middletown "if necessary," including four rifle companies, one machine gun company, and a headquarters detachment. They could be moved by motor truck.

In his statement, the governor said that "a reign of terror" has been started in Middletown and that rights of non-union employees have been violated. He said there was no question of wages or hours but merely "the closed shop and the check-off which means that every employee will have to pay tribute to John Lewis."

JAPANESE PLAN NEW FAR EAST ECONOMIC PACT

TOKYO, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The government today declared its determination to found "a new order" in East Asia for the purpose of uniting Japan, China and Manchukuo in a political and economic bloc opposed to Communism and possibly aimed at renunciation of the nine power treaty. Bennett Says Firm Willing To Help Stabilize Wage, Working Conditions

Martin has said that he would seek a 65 cents an hour minimum wage in the parts plants. Bennett told reporters that "where it is any of our business, we will go along with any plan for stabilizing wages and working conditions."

"Our purchasing department has been instructed not to favor parts manufacturers with low wage rates at the expense of competitors with higher wage scales and better working conditions," Bennett said.

But any plans for cooperation between Ford and the U. A. W. remained a mystery to most of the board members already in Washington. Another committee was drafting a national policy for a coordinated organizational campaign to bring 140,000 Ford employees from coast to coast into the Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate.

Some of Martin's better foes on the U. A. W. board appeared irked by Martin's secret negotiations with Bennett and his brief meeting with Henry Ford without the presence of other C. I. O. or U. A. W. leaders. They said that their only knowledge of the events had come from newspaper accounts.

treaty or the "open door" policy other than to say that the government was "confident" foreign powers would adapt their attitude to the "new conditions."

But a foreign office spokesman expressed the personal and unofficial opinion that no portion of East Asia should be under western influence, thus indicating a possible expectation that the nine power treaty would be revised.

Under the nine power treaty, the United States, Great Britain, France, Japan and other nations involved guaranteed the sovereignty of China and agreed to maintain the "open door" policy of trade. The "open door" policy means that all foreign powers would be on an equal basis in China trade, but recently there have been mounting American and British complaints that Japan has closed the door in areas dominated by Japanese troops.

Taft Expenses Cited

Sen. Robert J. Bulkley in a Toledo speech accused his Republican challenger, Robert A. Taft, of not submitting all current campaign expense accounts promptly in order to minimize total cost.

He said that although Taft had filed an account of about $25,000 since the primary, "we know, of course, that expenditures have been held back in order to permit him to make a modest showing."

He ridiculed Republican statements that economic conditions have not materially improved under the Roosevelt administration and repeated earlier charges that Taft misrepresented his votes in the senate on important legislation.

An attack on James Metzbaum Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, was delivered in Cleveland, Metzbaum's home town by Paul M. Herbert, the Republican candidate, who accused Metzbaum, of "ducking" roll calls in the Ohio senate on relief legislation, old age pensions, public works and schools.
